

Knight of Cups

Traditional meaning:

A new person is in your life, someone who is fast talking but his talk does not match his walk. You feel fairly strongly about the way he is doing things, whether this feeling is positive or negative.

My Interpretation:

This knight seems very well protected. A sturdy helmet with a visor. A strong neck guard. Shoulder guards and a thick jacket. His helmet insignia indicates he values speed. But there are also red tulips behind him, indicating he can value gentleness as well.

The cup is right in front of his face. For some reason to me that seems to indicate he's ill – that he could need to throw up sometime soon. It's a strange image. It doesn't seem to be there for him to drink from.

He doesn't seem very happy either – maybe sort of resigned.
