

Seven of Cups

Traditional meaning:

This is a card of reality and imagination, of multiple choices. Some aren't real. Some are. Some could be dangerous. Some could be great. Some might seem great but be dangerous. Some sites say the snake represents knowledge (good) but also danger. They say the head represents a nice companion. It's about paying attention to make the wise choice out of many.

My Interpretation:

A quite intriguing image full of lots of components. There is the rod on top, signifying power. Then a deep sea helmet for exploration of new places. Then a drowning man? Apparently there's danger here too. But a big, beautiful yellow flower adds joy. Then a beautiful butterfly with a wealth of fruits and grapes. But then we have the cobra, more danger. And then a rainbow both filling and leaving the cup.

So what is it? A plethora of things, both dangerous and beautiful, and I have to carefully manage to choose the good while avoiding the bad.
