

Two of Cups

Traditional meaning:

A meeting of soul mates, or a truce between enemies. Strong energies, the power of the attraction.

My Interpretation:

This one is intriguing for me. At first glance it seems to be a pair of lovers, sharing goblets of wine. However, on closer glance, he is leaning forward, his eyes on her. His cup is pressed forward towards her. She is leaning back, her cup closer in to her, in a more defensive mode. She is protecting herself, her cloak around her, waiting and watching. She is almost back out of the frame, while he is leaning forward into the center of it.

So they are together, yes. They are doing well; they have sturdy cloaks and warm hats. The world around them is completely absent. Nobody else exists but they two. But he is the one being active, while she is pondering, deciding what she is going to do in response.

