

Seven of Swords

Traditional meaning:

We are stressed out, overwhelmed, and we feel like a victim. In part it is our own point of view and mental state which is causing this fix we are in.

My Interpretation:

A man – some sort of a noble – is carrying five swords while another two are stuck in the ground behind him. The five swords almost look like they're going into his back and neck. The remaining two swords look like they're pinning his cloak into the ground, so he can't move forward.

His head is bowed, and this is quite a lot of metal for him to be lugging on his own. Even the back of his cloak seems harsh, like woven boards.

The sky is gloomy and cloudy, and there are harsh mountains ahead. He does have a nice hat on but somehow he has gotten himself into this predicament.
